

How will Bosch transform the Voralberg region's power supply?

To make this vision reality, Bosch is currently helping to overhaul the Voralberg region's power supply. In the future, a virtual power plant will replace the large power plants that currently transport power directly to the region's consumers.

How does Bosch's virtual power plant work?

To balance these fluctuations out, Bosch has developed software solutions that make it possible to draw power from different, decentralized, and primarily renewable sources of energy and manage them centrally. This creates a virtual power plant that makes energy available whenever it is needed.

How does Bosch manage energy needs?

Energy needs also fluctuate: depending on the weather, the natural light, and the time of day, energy consumption needs rise and fall. To balance these fluctuations out, Bosch has developed software solutions that make it possible to draw power from different, decentralized, and primarily renewable sources of energy and manage them centrally.

What is Bosch's 'smart city Rheintal' project?

The "Smart City Rheintal" project has an ambitious goal: to make the region's energy supply CO₂-neutral by 2050 with the help of decentralized green energy power generation. To make this vision reality, Bosch is currently helping to overhaul the Voralberg region's power supply.

As it is an indirect solar system, a heat transfer fluid circulates through the collectors rather than the potable water. This system is therefore ideal in frost or poor water quality areas. The system is also backed-up by electric boosting. A 250L Bosch European designed indirect system will be introduced during the second half of 2011.
