Will a Gigafactory for lithium-ion batteries in France create jobs?

A gigafactory for lithium-ion batteries in France will create jobs and boost the European battery industry to drive cleaner mobility. Anastasia Walch-Guinebert has always enjoyed solving problems and figuring out ways to improve things. She also found the continuous innovation in the field of energy transition fascinating.

Will France start a lithium factory in 2025?

A project was announced in Germany in early June and the Strasbourg-based company Viridian Lithium plans to open the first French lithium factory for batteries there by the end of 2025. It will source ores from Latin America and aims to produce 100,000 tons of lithium hydroxide by 2030.

Where are Europe's lithium extraction & production projects based?

Europe's lithium extraction and production projects have been mostly undertaken by small and medium-scale companies across the continent. "The most successful ones are in Finland.

Can Europe make battery cells locally?

The local academic and industrial landscape, which includes Verkor, is in the midst of a powerful wave of innovation. Europe needs to be able to manufacture battery cells locally, thereby creating jobs and investment opportunities across the continent.

Which countries have a monopoly on lithium?

Currently, Australia, Chile, China, and Argentina have a near-monopoly on lithium extraction. The demand for lithium batteries, each containing about 10 kilos of the metal, is rising and global production will need to increase 40-fold in 20 years. They run on lithium batteries.

Does Europe want a share of the booming lithium market?

Europe is trying to get a share in the booming lithium market. The continent has lithium deposits, but they have never been properly exploited, until now. France, in particular, has joined the 'white gold rush'. The country's first lithium mine is set to open in the Allier department in 2028.

Lithium battery makers in Europe are working hard to localise production and meet EU regulatory goals while protecting their supply chains from geopolitical disruption. ... has opened the first of three planned European battery gigafactories in Billy-Berclau, Douvrin, France. The gigafactory has an initial production line capacity of 13 ...
