What is a solar request for Proposal (RFP)?

Numerous government agencies, educational facilities, non-profits, and businesses are installing solar energy systems to reduce operating costs and decrease carbon emissions. Organizations commonly issue a solar request for proposal (RFP) to get bids from qualified contractors for a given PV project.

Where can I get a solar RFP?

There are a variety of resources available to organizations issuing RFPs for PV arrays, including the American Cities Climate Challenge On-Site Solar Request for Proposals template and the National Renewable Energy Laboratory's (NREL's) Writing Solar Requests for Proposals (RFPs): Lessons from NREL's University PV Implementation Assistance Program.

Where can I find a model RFP for third-party solar?

CERTs has a Model RFP for Third-Party Solar that you can download and adapt to issue your own request. You can use the CERTs Solar Directory to help you search for solar installers, or ask CERTs to send your RFP to developers. You may be interested in using the Master Contract through the State of Minnesota's Office of State Procurement.

How do I write a solar RFP?

While solar projects can vary by size, location, equipment, and goals, there are five best practices to keep in mind for your RFP: Start with a clear goal to help develop the RFP and to evaluate the proposals. Focus on system performance outcomes rather than on specific technical or equipment requirements.

What should be included in a solar RFP response?

Solar RFP responses typically contain: Some RFPs for solar projects may require supporting local, woman-owned, or minority-owned businesses and using local labor. Also, some projects may include a marketing or community education component, which should be addressed in the solar RFP response.

What happens if a solar contractor is awarded a contract?

Upon an award, the solar contractor is bound to execute the contract and begin performance. If another contractor that supplied a proposal thinks that it had the best value proposal, the contractor can question the government's evaluation process.
