of the number of solar panels you will need at each wattage. We will still be using our previous formula, which says the number of panels is equal to your daily energy usage divided by the product of your panel wattage and peak sun hours.

We will also calculate how many kWh per year do solar panels generate and how much does that save you on electricity. Example: 300W solar panels in San Francisco, California, get an average of 5.4 peak sun hours per day. That means it will produce $0.3\text{kW} \times 5.4\text{h/day} \times 0.75 = 1.215\text{ kWh}$ per day. That's about 444 kWh per year.
